(Max Planck Institute for Brain Research)

The Max Planck Institute for Brain Research is one of the leading research institutes in the field of neuroscience, with a focus on neural circuit function. There is a wealth of knowledge, new and old, on how our brains work. In our Association Friends of the MPI for Brain Research, we will share with you the latest research findings of our institute and provide an opportunity for you and your family to see how research is really done.

If you are interested in our various outreach activities and in learning about how neurons, synapses and neuronal networks lead to behavior and perception, you should become a member of our Association.

Membership benefits include:

- Twice a year, you will receive a newsletter with an overview of the latest research results, events and publications of the MPI for Brain Research
- You will have access to all the lectures of the institute, including the Neuroscience Lectures
- You can visit the Institute's library upon request
- You will receive personal invitations to events at the institute

With your contribution, we will further support the efforts of our young scientists via awards (e.g. the annual scientific discovery award) and by offering them additional funds for travel, publication of their results and scientific exchanges. Our outreach activities are also to be partly funded via the Association. You can become a member by filling in our application form. The annual membership fee can be automatically transferred from your bank account.
